Prevent FROM	Stop something from happening (followed by V-ing)	Rate limiters prevent malicious bots from flooding API endpoints.
Prohibit FROM	Formally forbid someone from doing something	Candidates are prohibited from using physical calculators during the test.
Rely ON / UPON	Depend on with full confidence	Never rely on unverified secondary sources; inspect the ground truth.
Responsible FOR	Having an obligation or accountability for	The release manager is responsible for production stability.
Similar TO	Resembling without being identical	This pseudocode loop structure is very similar to a C++ while loop.
Succeed IN	Achieve a desired goal (followed by V-ing)	With disciplined mock practice, you will succeed in clearing the cutoff.

⚖️ PART 6: 10 MOST CONFUSING HOMOPHONES & DICTION TRAPS

CONFUSING WORD PAIR	DISTINCTION & EXAM APPLICATION
Complement vs Compliment	Complement = something that completes or brings to perfection (e.g., 'The caching layer complements the database'). Compliment = polite expression of praise (e.g., 'He received a compliment on his architecture').
Principal vs Principle	Principal = head of an organization, or primary/main (e.g., 'The principal cause of the bug'). Principle = fundamental truth, moral rule, or scientific law (e.g., 'SOLID principles of OOP').
Stationary vs Stationery	Stationary (with 'a') = not moving, fixed in place. Stationery (with 'e' as in Envelope) = writing paper, pens, and office supplies.
Affect vs Effect	Affect (usually Verb) = to influence or produce a change in (e.g., 'Network latency affects throughput'). Effect (usually Noun) = result or consequence (e.g., 'The effect of the patch was immediate').
Eminent vs Imminent	Eminent = famous, respected, distinguished within a profession. Imminent = about to happen very soon, impending (e.g., 'System failure is imminent').
Illicit vs Elicit	Illicit = illegal, forbidden by law or rules. Elicit = to draw forth or evoke a response or information (e.g., 'The interviewer elicited detailed technical answers').
Council vs Counsel	Council = an advisory, deliberative, or administrative body. Counsel = advice given, or an attorney/advisor representing someone.
Allusion vs Illusion	Allusion = an indirect or passing reference to something. Illusion = a deceptive appearance, false impression, or optical trick.
Discrete vs Discreet	Discrete (with separate 'e's) = individually separate, distinct, and unconnected. Discreet (with double 'ee' together) = careful, prudent, keeping secrets.
Precede vs Proceed	Precede = come before in time, order, or rank. Proceed = carry on or continue an action, move forward.
